Oakwood Students from a Wide Area

"We are broadening the basis of our patronage," says Charles W. Hutton, Headmaster of Oakwood School, as he considers the School in the fall of 1958. "Our students come from an increasingly wide geographical area, at present from 21 states and nine foreign countries. We have more children of alumni and more Quakers—representing many 'segments' of American Quakerism — and more day students, about fifty this year. The School has its largest enrollment to date—206 students are now in the 9th through the 12th grades."

Oakwood saw the dedication, on October 31, of a big addition to the Lane Gymnasium. Ralph and Jean Conner have made a generous gift of $200,000 to the School, thus making possible the erection of this fine building which will eventually house the music, art, and athletic activities, as well as providing fine recreational facilities. Later, dramatics will center here also, when a stage is constructed at the end of the present Lane Gymnasium. Raymond Ruge of Cornwall Meeting is the architect. Some of the activities of Oakwood Day, October 18, when parents, alumni, and neighbors of the School visited the campus, took place in the new gym, and the formal dedication—a dance to which the Conners invited all students, staff, and board members—was held at the end of October.

Several members of the faculty were at summer schools, thus helping the School to keep up with new trends in art, mathematics, science, and other fields. Alfred Henderson had a scholarship to Bowdoin for work in physics under the National Science Foundation, and Francis Henderson had a similar grant for biology at Union. Paul Taylor took work in the "new" mathematics at Rutgers, while Isabella Taylor studied creative art there. Under the leadership of Gerald Vance, Dean of Boys, special aids to the reading program are being developed. The program for Oakwood Day included a panel discussion on college admission, a topic of vital concern to students and their parents.

Thirty-nine members of the class of 1958, of a class of forty-one, are in college this fall.

What Is Friends' Education?

An administrator is confronted occasionally with the question: "What is Friends' education?" A hurried look at catalogs and announcements of church and private schools reveals doubt that Friends' education is much different from that of other denominations. All seem to be interested in the individual, moral character, and the "whole man." Emphasis is placed upon cultivation of the intellect, acquiring skills in other phases of applied learning, and in physical development. All train people for citizenship in the free world and for Christian service. Some emphasize religious and family atmosphere, others, providing education for all who are able to profit by it. In these respects, Quaker education does not differ essentially from instruction in other schools and colleges.

Yet a study of the history of Friends' education, both in England and America, and first-hand teaching experiences show that there is a difference; and if this difference is understood and applied, a significant contribution can be made to the whole field of education.

How Different?

A study of Friends' schools on whatever level, elementary, secondary, or collegiate, reveals distinguishing characteristics! First, worth of the individual; second, the principle of growth; third, Divine authority; fourth, the blend of theory and practice; and lastly, community understanding.

Those who have taught in Friends' schools realize the great emphasis upon the worth of the individual. In this an upward comparison is made. Man is viewed as a "little lower than the angels," rather than a biological specimen subject to animal behavior. Friends insist that the divine spirit energizes and unifies personality so that it is capable of apprehending universal and absolute truth. Through spiritual energy the individual is made of infinite worth and through this energy happy families, cooperative neighbors, and creative societies become potent.

Friends' education, also, is concerned with growth. It regards the individual not as static but as an organic unit constantly undergoing change, the expression of an inner living seed that grows in natural and unhurried ways to produce physical, intellectual, and spiritual maturity. In family, school, and meeting this growth to wholeness is fed by the divine inner light. Teachers become gardeners, ministering to "that of God" in man.

Friends' education rests upon a concept of divine authority. This authority comes not from ecclesiastical pronouncements, scripture texts, cultural codes or scientific dogmas, but from an inner first-hand encounter with the spirit of the living God. While edified by each of these, Friends' education goes beyond them to a first-hand experience with the Christ "who has come to redeem His people Himself." Parents and teachers gain their authority not by virtue of the position they hold, but by the kind of life they live.

Moreover, Friends' education is based upon a blend of intellectual inquiry, emotional understanding, and an effective application of theory and practice. Working logically and experimentally, a teacher is at his best when the glint of his eye, the tone of his voice, and the touch of his hand reveal that he has found truth.

In developing the blend of theory and practice, Friends "center down in truth." They allow the spirit of the Divine to "structure" their minds, and "tool" their spirits until they are able to grasp the truth of both the scientific and spiritual worlds.

Too, Friends' education is concerned with community understanding. More important than academic degrees or Phi Beta Kappa keys are the honorable day-to-day dealings of one person with another. This type of community understanding enables individuals to rise above the prejudice and confusion of the world in which they live. It rests upon integrity of purpose, simplicity of life, and continuity of faith.

Distinctively Quaker

While expression of the above emphases may be found in other types of education, the way in which these are put together, along with their overtones, constitutes a Friends' pattern of education. This can be timely and effective. The rebellion which has come against the oversecularization of education provides Friends with a new opportunity. The "ends and interests approach" of so-called progressive education and the demands of society underlying vocational learning have played down the values upon which our free society rests. There is a fresh recognition that people reach for "lights beyond the prison of the five senses for keepsakes that outlast hunger or death."

The hysteria, charge and counter-charge against the American system of education occasioned by the firing of a Russian satellite into space only accentuate the necessity for Friends educators to understand and apply the basic principles on which their schools were founded. These are: high quality, rigorous intellectual training, regard for scientific truth, and a faith that goes beyond the pronouncements of the church, the Scriptures, or scientific evidence.

Grounded in truth that blends both intellect and emotion, theory and practice, Friends' education can speak to the condition of elementary and secondary schools, colleges and universities. It can emphasize that teaching, research, and administration are a ministry in which free spirits are fashioned for the responsibilities of the modern world. And it is a joy to know that corporate industry, alumni, churches, and the community as a whole are beginning to recognize the true worth of this type of education. Let us go forward with vigor and faith!

George School, A Pilot Project

George School began its 65th year with the largest number of children of Friends ever enrolled in the school, 233 of a school population of 451.

The new year brought two very interesting experiments to the school. One Wednesday, October 1, David Mallory on a year's leave from Germantown Friends School, visited George School for a week to begin the first of six such visits to the following schools: George School, Bucks County, Pa.; Central and Girls High School, Philadelphia, Pa.; Allentown High School, Allentown, Pa.; Scarsdale High School, Scarsdale, New York; and George Washington High School in New York City.

The schools have been selected for a pilot project under the sponsorship of the Educational Records Bureau to make a study of student values. It will be Mr. Mallory's task to determine after his stay at each school what impact, if any, is made by the school (teachers, administrators, coaches, student organizations, etc.) upon the students and their sense of values and in what ways these values are put into actual practice within the school.

Another innovation at George School is the product of the summer work of Grant C. Fraser, teacher of mathematics. For the last two years those in the mathematics department have been studying the changes in the methods of presenting mathematical concepts in the secondary schools. They have attended seminars at the Penn Charter School and at Cheltenham School in Philadelphia conducted by teachers from the mathematics department at Haverford College.

This summer Grant Fraser wrote a completely revised and new approach to the teaching of algebra in the first year. All students beginning the study of algebra at George School are taking part in an approach to the study of mathematical concepts which may well revolutionize the teaching of mathematics throughout George School in particular and other schools in general.

The text, now in mimeographed form, has been studied and highly praised by a mathematics administrator in a nearby public school system.

George School played host to forty-five delegates of the New York Herald Tribune Forum on Saturday, October 25. The general purpose of the Conference was to discover ways to enhance the value of their American experience for the foreign students sponsored by the Tribune to visit American schools.

Among the proposals were, first, to make more flexible the curriculum content for these students and, second, to appoint American students-hosts who would remain with the foreign students during their stay in the states, accompanying them from school to school.

Miss C. Eileen Murray of Somerset, England, Quarterly Meeting, has been appointed assistant dean at George School for the year. She is a graduate of Sidcot Friends School and of Guilford College.

Over 50% of Friends University's 1958 graduates, 146 in all, have entered the teaching profession.

A group of students gather for meeting at the historic Newtown Meetinghouse. Meeting for worship, held twice weekly, is an integral part of the community life at school.

Pendle Hill's Specific Mission

Twenty-eight years of existence now testify to Pendle Hill's usefulness in meeting a variety of human needs. Teachers have come to spend their sabbatical, missionaries their furlough; graduate students have found it a good place to complete a thesis; to theological students it has offered a needed complement to their academic work; for hundreds of persons it has meant concentrated training for overseas service. Students just out of college have come for a year in search of their real vocation. Many people have found it necessary to leave important jobs and busy lives for a term or a year to find their bearings and perhaps start out in a new direction.

Each year foreign students come to learn new ways and to test their own. It has provided the freedom and encouragement that some writers have needed to complete books, articles, pamphlets. Persons interested in pacifism, labor unions, racial equality and other social issues have discovered the incentive and directions needed to carry out their concerns.

In more than any other way Pendle Hill has served a need on the American scene for a lay school of religion. Persons from all religious, racial and cultural inheritances are welcomed. In its study program Pendle Hill welcomes the truth wherever it is to be found.

The specific mission of Pendle Hill is to bring the resources of Christian tradition in general and Quaker tradition in particular to bear upon contemporary needs.

The Penn Plan and Program of Personalized Education Includes:

Penn Plans Ahead

Building on 85 years of experience, Penn College plans its program to reach the century mark in proven strength and increased usefulness.

On October 10, the 20th president of Penn College, Sheppard Arthur Watson, was inaugurated. The modest ceremony was held in Spencer Memorial Chapel with Dr. Thomas E. Jones of Earlham College giving the inaugural address. Guests attending the inauguration represented colleges and universities of Iowa, Friends colleges throughout the United States, educational associations, Friends churches of Iowa, alumni association, and the local community of Oskaloosa and Mahaska County. Board members, faculty and students participated in the ceremonies.

A significant feature of the new administration is that the responsibilities and services of Penn College are being extended as Nebraska Central College of Central City, Nebraska merges its educational records and resources with those of Penn. In planning for the future, the merging current from this productive center of friendly education will add new values of contact and counsel as Friends of Nebraska Yearly Meeting and alumni of N.C.C. look to Penn as the center of their educational interests.

The Penn Plan may be described as one of personalized education in which excellent teachers of character and ability join forces to develop the personal resources of ambitious and talented students in preparation for service.

With a student body of 260 students and a faculty of 20 full time teachers, eight of whom hold earned doctor's degrees, the possibilities of this educational enterprise are obvious.

Academic excellence based on a broad foundation of general education with advanced undergraduate studies gives direction and pre-professional preparation for a number of areas of specialization. The teacher educational offering at Penn is definitely professional in nature with preparation for elementary teaching and secondary teaching in the various fields of major interest. Practical preparation for the Christian ministry, agriculture, and homemaking is also offered. Preparation for civil service examinations for government employment is, too, a part of the educational service which Penn provides for its students.

Penn College football team, under the coaching of Earl L. Craven and Kenton Harris, is receiving some well-deserved recognition. A group of 33 boys who like to play football and have good coaching are bound to achieve results.

New courses being offered at William Penn College include courses in Industrial Arts, Drawing and Painting, Nuclear and Radio Chemistry, Dynamics of American Politics.

* * *

Penn College professors are authors of three new books, as follows: 1. Beyond Freedom, by Professor Paul F. Bechtold; 2. An Approach to Some Masterpieces of Western World Literature, by Dr. Arthur L. Wormhoudt. 3. Ventures in Verse, by Dr. S. A. Watson.

The new subdivision for sale of lots on the Penn College farm is being gradually developed. The first addition has been plotted and lot sales will begin soon.

Whittier Has Unique Fellowship Program

Whittier College began its 57th year of classes this year with an enrollment of 1190, largest since the post war boom, and with 345 in its freshman class.

New Buildings

Notable among physical improvements this fall is the first use of two new buildings on campus.

The Walter F. Dexter Student Center, completed this summer at a cost of $650,000, and named for Whittier's fifth president, houses a campus inn with dining accommodations for 600, student executive offices, a snack bar, student lounge and recreation rooms, the bookstore, and alumni offices. In addition the student publication offices here have equipped a modern photographic dark room and studio.

The other new building, now in use, is the John Stauffer Lecture Laboratory, built at a cost of $175,000, adjoining Lou Henry Hoover Hall. It is a gift of Mr. John Stauffer, a trustee of Whittier. The new lecture room has a seating capacity of 300, and class rooms in the basement.

Two new buildings are now in the planning stage. The first is the Whittier College Memorial Chapel, on which work is expected to commence next summer. The second is a girl's dormitory, expected to house 100.

Church Fellowship Night

A new program at Whittier which has met with success this year is the bi-weekly Church Fellowship Night. Students, faculty and church leaders from the town of Whittier meet in the campus inn for supper and then gather for denominational fellowships. Participating in the program are the Aquinas Club (Roman Catholic), Baptist, Canterbury Club (Episcopal), Christian Science, Congregational, Friends, Lutheran, Presbyterian, and Wesley Club (Methodist). There is also a Skeptics Corner. Other groups are being added. Chapel is held every Thursday, with Convocations each Tuesday.

The Whittier College annual Student-Faculty Conference was held at Pilgrim Pines, near Redlands, October 4 and 5, and was well attended by both faculty and students. The theme this year was "Let's Climb A Mountain."

* * *

A memorial window in the new Whittier College Memorial Chapel, in memory of Dr. William Orville Mendenhall, sixth president of Whittier, who died July 5, 1958, and his wife Lucy Osgood Mendenhall, will be given by their son and daughter-in-law, William R. and Helen B. Mendenhall.

* * *

The first Ministers' Day will be held November 24 at Whittier College, with Dean Robert Elliott Fitch of Pacific School of Religion giving two addresses. Chaplain Robert Bobilin has sent invitations to 2500 ministers of Southern California. Dean Fitch will also lead the Religion and Life Conference at Whittier, November 20-25.

* * *

Sixteen additional or replacement faculty were added to the staff this year. Whittier now has 110 full and part-time faculty.

Friendly

With 1190 students, there is a warm "family spirit," a close-knit feeling of esprit de corps.

Cosmopolitan

Students come from 25 states, 10 foreign countries and represent 35 different denominations.

The Meeting School Looks Ahead

The Meeting School has entered its second year of operation with thirty-six students. Nineteen of these are Friends.

Begun as an "experiment in Quaker Education" the school still operates, seeking. With the Meeting for Worship at the center, and leading through the school business meeting to the total life of the community, the families and students work together to seek satisfying answers in intellectual, social and religious activities.

The Academic program: The first year was a transitional one, a transition from the conventional approach to learning through the class-room experience to a self-study and research approach. Some of the more mature students caught the spirit of the experiment early in the year and progressed satisfactorily. For some, a more structured program was indicated. Independent research, while rare, was done on occasion. Many students learned "how to study" which in itself is an accomplishment.

Work: Work is a functional part of community living. All of the chores of daily life are shared by the families and students. Meal preparation, clean-up, laundry, milking, live-stock care, stone wall building, house work, house re-

101 Years at Friendsville

The opening of the 102nd school year was a joyous occasion. Optimism, vision and hope prevail. The purpose of Friendsville Academy continues to be education under Christian influence.

The majority of students are from the surrounding area. However, ten states and Cuba are represented. The larger number of our students are Friends.

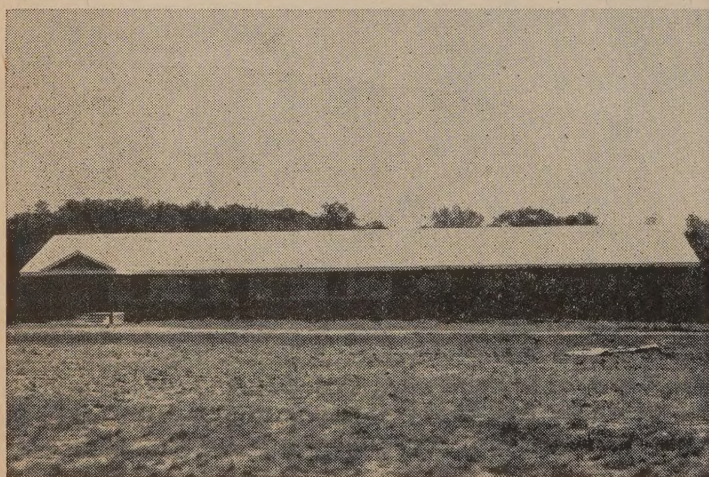

There is a dedicated staff headed by Norman Cardin, a former student of Friendsville Academy and graduate of Friends University with graduate work at Indiana University. The grade department is staffed by local personnel: Ruth Peters, Janet Moore and Irene Adams. Our High School faculty is as follows: Betty Bobb, Hillsboro, Ohio; Carleton Cates, Vasselboro, Maine; Irene Ellis, Friendsville, Tenn. All are full time teachers. In addition we have vocal and instrumental music, Bible and athletics under the direction of local part time teachers. Norman G. Hill is Field Representative and farm Supervisor. He and his family reside in the Harcourt Cottage on the 200 acre farm.

The Board of Directors of Friendsville Academy feels that the courses being offered are adequate to meet the needs of the times, not only for college preparation, but also as a basis for vocational training. In college preparation we have four years of mathematics and sufficient science for entrance in any institution of higher learning. The small staff, due to inadequate funds, limits the number of electives.

We are gratified with the progress of the new dormitory. However, it cannot be completed until more funds are available. Ernest Parks, Chairman of the Building Committee, has made every penny count toward the construction of the building. When this building is completed many of our problems will be solved. All in all, we believe we have a good year in store and we anticipate your continued prayer and financial support.

ness. Through the daily family devotional period and the Meeting for Worship, an attempt is made to relate daily life and the needs of the spirit. The Meeting for Worship is optional, but well attended. The Meeting for business is nearly always attended by all in the community. Many are led to a recognition of the life of the Spirit through service projects. Two thirds of the school will participate in an A.F.S.C. United Nations seminar in November. Eight Meeting Schoolers went on The Walk for Peace last spring. Several Meeting School students worked one Saturday with handicapped children at the Crotched Mountain Rehabilitation Center.

There is an established Monthly Meeting at the school. Each committee has student membership.

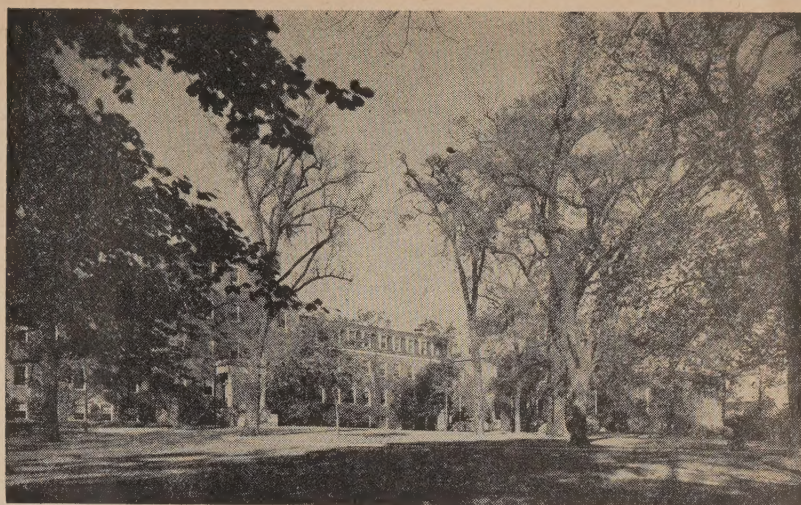

Play: It has long been a Quaker concern that our children be encouraged in the constructive use of play time, with wholesome recreation and activities offered. Most of the students felt that "the unprogrammed approach" to play was desirable. Soccer, touch football, softball, volleyball, basketball, hiking, bicycling, skiing, sledding, fishing, mountain climbing, social dancing, square dancing, group games, table games, and television are leisure time activities.

We are united in feeling our experiment should continue and invite the suggestions and help of all interested Friends.

Formal Advance Placement Course at Moses Brown

Robert N. Cunningham, acting headmaster at Moses Brown School, Providence, R. I. this last year, has been appointed headmaster. His first year of administration witnessed the dedication of the L. Ralston Thomas Science Building, a first annual meeting of the Parents Council, and an academic evaluation, in the form of a report by Henry Scattergood, principal of Germantown Friends School, and Henry Callard, headmaster of Gilman School in Baltimore.

The immediate occupancy of the new three classroom-laboratory opened the way for remodeling of the old science classrooms, which have become the headquarters of a separate Middle School for the 7th and 8th grades. These transition classes, until now the top of the Lower School and the youngest class in the Upper School, have four classrooms of their own, and meet language, arithmetic, and other teachers in turn. But they still enjoy the advantages of a home assembly room for chapel, for study, and for consultation with a teacher in charge of each grade. The sports program has been revised for the 75 boys in Middle School. Physical education classes, an introduction to all seasonal sports open to boys in Upper School, and a full intramural schedule of games fill the program. Lloyd F. Sprague directs Middle School, supervising in conferences with parents and teachers the progress of each boy.

Faculties of Upper, Middle, and Lower Schools meet once a month; separate faculty, departmental, and house master meetings take place every two weeks. Systematic visits by teachers within a department to each other's classes allow for continual examination of aims and teaching techniques.

Although Moses Brown students have been accepted individually in the past at the undergraduate level with advanced standing, not until this year has the school included in its curriculum a formal advanced placement course. The new course, worked out with the help of Brown University, gives a Senior student advanced standing in physics. Similar programs are projected in other departments, notably in French, since daily classes in the language begin in the fourth grade and will continue for student election through the twelfth grade.

No less important, a boy's sense of progress and security in social, religious, and club activities has been a central part of the school's planning. Next April, Moses Brown will be host to the annual Model United Nations, in which several hundred students from other schools will have a part. Discussion groups and attendance at nearby church-sponsored biblical history courses supplement the school's courses in Bible and their presentation of the principles of Quaker faith. Science, photography, stamp or French clubs may claim a boy's enthusiasm, for several such clubs have earned a traditional place in the Moses Brown student's weekly program to vie with his athletics and his work on publications.

Faculty and Facilities Increased at Olney

We at Olney this year are enjoying the satisfaction that comes from seeing plans materialize and needs met. Seldom has the school been able to grow in so many areas at once. But we regret that Morris L. Kirk, former principal and largely responsible for the progress of the present year, resigned last summer and is not at Olney to experience this satisfaction directly with the school family.

The enrollment has remained at 80, but an increase in tuition to $750 has let us enlarge our faculty significantly and reduce the average teaching assignment from four to three courses. Salary increases have been made, and a new faculty home has been erected.

Other improvements include completion of the new wing to the Main Building. Rooms for photography, art and recreation in addition to science lecture, storage, and laboratory rooms and an auditorium are now in use in this new wing. The former assembly room has been converted into a library and an adjoining librarian's office. This provides adequate shelving for all books and periodicals and seating for half the student body.

A senior course in advanced math has been introduced. The junior year of geometry now integrates plane and solid geometry and requires two years previous study of algebra. The sophomore social studies offering has been altered from a comprehensive world history course to a more intensive ancient history coverage, to better complement the senior course in modern European history instituted last year.

These advances were made in time to meet the challenge of the present student body. Of the 23 seniors, 20 plan to enter college next year. To enable them to choose wisely, trips to seven colleges are planned this fall. Other fall student activities include seminars in Pittsburgh and at the U. N., a journey to Philadelphia to play Westtown in soccer, and the annual Prince of Peace essay and declamation contests.

Morris Kirk, for the past six years principal of Olney, is now teaching in Youngstown, Ohio. His responsibilities have been partially assumed by Robert E. Hinshaw who served as assistant principal the past two years. A graduate of Scattergood School and Haverford College, Robert Hinshaw will continue as principal through the 1959-60 academic year. Assisting with the administration of the school is Thomas Cooper, business manager, a graduate of Olney.

Oakwood's faculty and staff put on a very extensive Hobby Show last February, directed by Isabelle F. Taylor. The large room in the basement of the Girls' Dormitory was filled with the handiwork, trophies, and collections, proving a greatly-varied and colorful range of interests and achievements.

young adults should be concerned about their own spiritual growth, yet Wilmington recognizes the responsibility of giving them the physical facilities to create the climate and background which encourage the growth of religious activities and concerns.

The proposed Religious Activities Center will include a Meeting Room seating 200 persons; a meditation room; a library-lounge, office space for the Department of Religion, campus religious organizations, Wilmington Yearly Meeting, and the Friends World Committee: classrooms, a kitchen and restrooms.

While realizing that no inspiring building will, in itself, bring immediate changes, Wilmington College does believe that such a center will make more effective the attempts of those students who, through their association, meditation, and worship, are searching for and finding inner resources.

Wilmington has recently been admitted to membership in the College Entrance Examination Board, whose best-known activity is its program of college entrance tests, required by schools as part of their admission procedure. Wilmington will establish a test center on its campus, and exams will be given Dec. 6, 1958; Jan. 10, Feb. 14, Mar. 14, May 16 and Aug. 12, 1959.

Clyde Milner Honored

The Mayor of the City of Greensboro, North Carolina, designated Thursday, October 16, 1958, as Clyde A. Milner Day, and called upon all citizens of the area to accord Dr. Milner "the recognition he so richly deserves" for his contributions to the growth of "education, culture, and the spiritual life of the City and its surrounding communities." On this day the President of Guilford College was further recognized by a well attended Convocation on Liberal Education held on the Guilford campus in honor of his 25th year as administrator of this Friends institution.

The Convocation featured several outstanding speakers. Capus Waynick, The Adjutant General of North Carolina, brought personal greetings from the Governor of the State and introduced President A. Hollis Edens of Duke University, who addressed the morning session on "The Future of Liberal Education in North Carolina." At the luncheon which followed, Dr. Franklin H. McNutt, Dean Emeritus of the Graduate School of the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, reviewed the outstanding qualities of a good administrator, illustrating them by his long-time friend and fellow educator, Clyde Milner. The afternoon program was enlightening and stimulating with Stringfellow Barr, Professor of Humanities of Newark College, Rutgers University, discussing "The Future of Liberal Education in the United States." Mr. Barr, teacher, editor, and author, is particularly distinguished for his leadership in the study of the "Great Books" and for his work in world government organizations. He was introduced by Dr. Gordon W. Blackwell, Chancellor of the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina in Greensboro.

On Friday, October 17, Guilford observed its annual Founders Day. The morning chapel was addressed by Howard H. Brinton, Director Emeritus of Pendle Hill, on the subject of "Quakerism and Liberal Education." He gave a thoughtful summary of his threefold concept of Friends education which he believes should combine the "Divine" arts, the liberal arts and the useful arts.

The ninth annual Ward Lecture was delivered Friday evening by J. Floyd Moore, Associate Professor of Biblical Literature and Religion at Guilford. His title was "Rufus Jones: Luminous Friend," and represented a distillation from his past three years of study of all the published writings of Rufus Jones as well as many unpublished manuscripts and letters. As is customary, immediately after this presentation, a printed pamphlet containing the lecture was made available. Copies may be obtained by writing to Guilford College, since the Ward Bequest supports both the publication and the distribution of this educational project.

Admissions Tighten at Friends University

More than 10 percent of the prospective students applying for admission to Friends University this fall were denied admission on the basis of their high school academic standings.

In addition to the 10 percent turned down, at least 50 more were advised not to apply because their high school records were exceedingly poor.

Friends University's faculty recommended, after extensive research, to tighten admission requirements beginning with the 1958-59 school year. An original recommendation by the admissions committee was later agreed upon by a committee for maintenance of academic standards.

The latter committee, according to Merle Bender, admissions counselor, is a standing committee which works constantly on both student and faculty standards.

Basically, the requirements for entrance to F. U. are these:

A student must have at least a C average for his high school academic work and must score above a certain point in the School College Ability Test, required of all students seeking admission to Friends.

A student with a C-minus grade point average may be permitted to take the SCAT test if there is other reason to believe that he can do college level work.

All applications for admission are given individual review by the admissions committee, composed of seven members of the faculty and administration.

Friends University is the first college in Kansas to use the tightening procedures in enrollment. The full evaluation of such a program is expected to make itself evident when the current freshman class completes four years at Friends. Dr. Cyril D. Garrett, Dean of F. U., said the overall academic achievement of this year's class will be compared with preceding years as a matter of measuring the success or failure of such action.

Already, students have applied for admission to Friends for the 1959-60 school year, a sign which is considered healthy by Bender and Garrett.

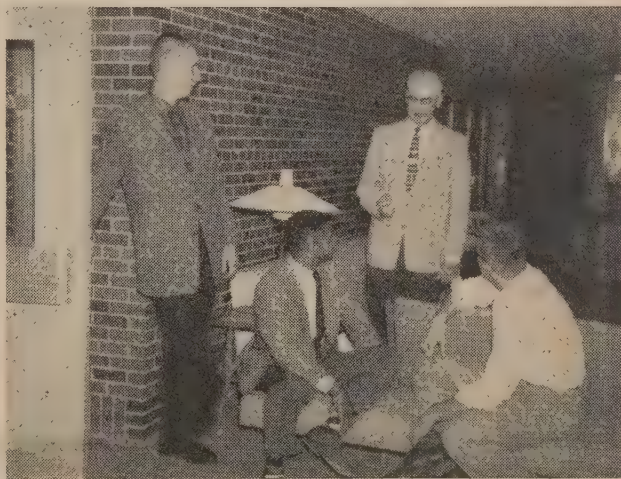

Friends University held its second summer school in Colorado at a site near Green Mountain Falls, offering classes in psychology, history, science and Bible.

Vision of Greatness

Identity . . . Commitment

"One of Earlham's great responsibilities is to encourage its students to know who they are, to have a clear sense of identity and purpose, and to dare to be different, to dare to try to create a considered pattern to their lives . . .

"Students must be helped to see that things of the mind and spirit are more enduring than the things of the flesh and more worthy of giving one's life and energies to . . . to give oneself to people . . . to a good cause . . . to dedicate oneself and all that one has to the becoming truly a child of the Living God"*

Elton Trueblood, professor of philosophy, and two of his students, Garry Thomas, Newton, Pa. Meeting and Deborah Lamb, Cambridge, Mass. Meeting, lay a brick walk from Yokefellow House to the new Trueblood library-study-seminar building just being completed on the Earlham campus.

Earlham College Continues to Pioneer

Earlham college enters its one-hundred-eleventh year facing forward with contagious vigor under the leadership of its new president, Landrum Bolling.

Within the framework of solid, traditional liberal arts offerings, Earlham continues to pioneer with exciting educational challenges. Much emphasis is being placed on independent study, basis of all true learning.

This means avoiding, so far as is possible, "spoon feeding" of young people or "playback" teacher-student learning patterns. It means far more than merely leading a student through four years of routine course work with knowledge organized into neat units leading to tight conclusions.

Life isn't like that. No authority will tell a student, after graduation, what he should read, how he should live, how he should vote or how to organize his committee reports: he must be ready to think and act on his own whether he goes into graduate work or into running a service station.

Earlham believes that "self-education" should be the goal of a college experience, that the student's capacity to plot his own course with responsibility, knowledge and insight should be cultivated intensively.

And so, from the day he comes to the Earlham campus as a freshman, until the day he receives his degree, he is challenged to ask questions to learn how to go about, on his own, to find the right answers, to make the right choices!

For the able and alert student at Earlham this day may mean fewer class periods, more reading periods, the opportunity to work out his own writing and research projects, to do "independent study" which may range up to a free time for a semester or an off-campus semester in this country or abroad.

These and many other avenues are being explored in Earlham's "education-for-responsibility" program!

summer under the National Science Foundation.

Westtown Begins $450,000 Capital Fund Drive

For several years the Committee in charge of Westtown has realized that there are many basic needs at the School which cannot be met out of the operating budget. A long-range financial study of the School has been made for the purpose of determining its present and future capital needs.

A formidable and comprehensive list of objectives for a capital fund program has been prepared and each need has been studied in the light of how soon it would become imperative. The Westtown Committee has recommended that the most important needs be included in a capital fund appeal to be called the Westtown School 1959 Fund:

- Faculty salaries
- Scholarship funds
- Expansion and modernization of the Library and Auditorium
- A new combination track, hockey and soccer field

• A modern sewage disposal system

• Additions to the Lower School

To realize this ambitious program, a campaign goal of $450,000 has been set. Toward this amount, the Westtown Committee has appropriated $100,000 from unrestricted endowment funds. A committee of alumni, parents and friends of Westtown will seek to raise the balance of $350,000 in a capital gifts campaign.

Westtown School opened its 160th year with the largest group of Friends in its boarding department in quite a few decades. There are 196 Friends and the total percentage in the boarding department is 70%. Including the day students in the seventh, eighth, ninth and tenth grades, the number of Friends in the upper school is 235, plus 35 Friends in the lower school, making a total of 274 Friends attending in the first through the twelfth grade. Students this year are from 29 States plus the District of Columbia, and approximately 10 foreign countries are represented, though most of the students from the foreign countries are American.

* * *

Among the 87 new boarding students, 44 of them are children of alumni, an additional 18 have or have had brothers or sisters at Westtown, 20 are members of the Society of Friends but new to Westtown, and only 5 of the 87 are not Friends or the children of Friends.

Whittier professors, Dr. Harry Nerhood, History Dep't.; Dr. C. Milo Connick, Dep't. of Religion; and Prof. Gerald Patton from the Sociology Dep't. were in Europe and the Middle East on European seminars last summer, accompanying students from Whittier and other colleges.

Scattergood Program and Facilities Expand

The development of crafts and hobbies has been strengthened by the facilities incorporated in the new building at Scattergood School. Weaving, which was introduced last spring, is now expanded into a weaving program open to all students sometime during the year. The new area for arts and crafts is making it possible to expand the pottery work. Space has been set aside for radio and other scientific interests, and the darkroom has been developed by the students of the school.

One of the pleasures of life at Scattergood School is the evening collection when students and staff gather for a half hour before bed time for some kind of group experience. With a new Hi-Fi set this fall, the playing of records has become much more pleasurable. The group singing so far this year has centered around German songs. Although German is an elective subject, there is full participation by all students in the German program this year.

The Farm Home Crafts Class has been especially active this fall. Fourteen sophomores, each with a bred sow, found themselves the managers of about 120 pigs after the first few weeks of the school year. This program is in addition to the regular school program and is directed through the Farm and Home crafts course. The practical work of the course is carried over into the chore activities of the day.

This year the class made a field trip to an experimental farm and protein feed factory. Combining this with a fall camping trip, the class had a profitable excursion.

The proximity of the State University of Iowa is of great value to the school in making available many speakers and events of a high level. This, in addition to the number of people who are persuaded to stop at the school to share concerns with the students, broadens the program from the rural locality to concerns throughout the world.—Leaneore Goodenow, Director.

Lincoln School's 75th Anniversary Year

Lincoln School of Providence, R. I., is this year celebrating its 75th Anniversary and has a special committee with Stanley F. Mathes, Vice President of the Board of Trustees, as chairman. Three major events are planned: One has already taken place—First, Chapel on September 17, with Dr. Bernice Cronkhite, Dean of the Graduate School of Radcliffe College, as the very able and delightful speaker. The second event is scheduled for January 28—the speaker will be Dr. Millicent McIntosh, President of Barnard College, who will also lead a discussion on the future of the independent school. This event will be sponsored by mothers, fathers, and alumnae. The third event of the year is scheduled for Friday, May 8, with a dinner for all friends and alumnae of the school at Brown University Refectory.

Commencement on June 4, it is felt, belongs to the Seniors and to the undergraduates. It will, however, be a special closing event for everybody because of the happy circumstance that we have been able to secure as speaker, Elizabeth Gray Vining.

The picture is of the new Library which is one of the notable additions to the physical plant. It is a very beautiful and useful room. Other improvements include the remodeling of the Pre-school and the painting of the Pre-school building and the Victorian house separated from it only by a hockey field. These buildings have been painted a soft yellow to match the stucco of the main buildings of the school just across the street from them.

Academically speaking, the school has moved forward this year in curriculum study, in an evaluation program under the New England Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, and in preparing girls for Advanced Placement examinations in Biology and English.

This anniversary year also marks the close of fifty years of service to the school by Marion S. Cole, who retires on July 1, 1959. She has served the school as Head of the English Department, Associate Principal, and Headmistress since 1940. Her successor is Mary Louise Schaffner, A.B. Radcliffe College, A.M., Columbia University. She is now Director of the Middle School and teacher of English at the Baldwin School, Bryn Mawr, Pa., and was the unanimous choice of the School Committee for the eighth Headmistress of Lincoln School.

George Fox Program Meets Individual Needs

A most significant study is in progress to tailor our educational program to the needs of each learner. As a result of the faculty's study over a period of the last several years, three separate programs have evolved. The one, dealing with the largest group of students, is a general set of courses in Christian liberal arts, and handled in the usual manner through lectures, class-room discussions, laboratories, and the common tools of college experience.

The second, designed to meet the needs of slow learners, gives an educational opportunity of at least one year to a select group whose high school program may have been quite weak. After a series of tests the student may be limited to a light program with additional counseling and opportunities for help in English, or mathematics, or in other areas where special help is demanded. If he responds to the opportunity, he may be permitted to enter the degree-granting program; if not, he may be asked to withdraw, but not until he has had a taste of work under dynamically Christian teachers, and the blessings of a Christian environment.

The third program, which is being developed even this autumn, is especially geared to the superior student or the gifted ones. In this a student may elect to enter the sophomore year (and on through) in an enriched program of more independent studies, eventuating in some special project at the senior year. Perhaps not more than three or four students will be involved at any one time.

The faculty and student-body are very eager in the development of the three programs, adjusted as they are to the individual needs of our students, and demonstrating our concern for each student as a Christian person.

It can be said, even after only two full years of the programs, that a finer type of serious scholarship is already evident, with more curiosity being displayed, and a higher degree of accomplishment. Dean Kenneth M. Williams, together with the Academic Standing Committee, has made a very excellent contribution to the life of our institution.

at Friends Select Friends' Select School, Philadelphia, Pa., in its 270th year, dedicated the newly constructed gymnasium on Parents' Night, October 14, 1958. This building, designed by Fridtjof Tobiessen, architect and member of the Williston Meeting, includes locker rooms, showers, a spacious recreation lounge, and gymnasium area.

At this meeting, the faculty paid tribute to Headmaster G. Laurence Blauvelt's efforts in making this addition to the school by presenting in his name a special contribution of $200.00 to the Development Fund. At the present time the alumni, parents, and friends of the school have raised $250,000 toward the goal of $300,000. The gymnasium, a new heating plant, and an audio-visual class room complete the first step planned in the program. The headmaster announced at the dedication that the School Committee had authorized the re-equipping and expansion of science laboratories. It is hoped these will be ready for use by February, 1959. Additional elementary school rooms will be completed in the last step of the plan.

The curriculum committee has added Advanced Placement work in English and in history. German and public speaking are again being offered.

With increased enrollment two new teachers have been added to the upper school faculty. Newly-organized extra-curricular activities include: three dramatic reading groups, a current events club, stamp clubs, and a French club meeting during lunch periods to use conversational French.

In the lower school the program is being varied to provide as much continuity as possible. Limited departmentalization of the Fifth and Sixth Grade begun last year is proving its value. A science club and other activities are in addition to the academic program. In April, 1959 kindergarten through the Sixth Grade will undergo the regular evaluation by the Pennsylvania Association of Private Academic Schools, and the faculty is already working to prepare for this committee visit.

WESTTOWN REGIONAL SCHOLARSHIPS

In order to encourage the attendance of exceptionally fine students at Westtown, fifteen Regional Scholarships are offered to Friends throughout the United States each year.

Regional Scholarships are honor scholarships and carry with them an automatic grant of $100.00 per year. A larger sum according to the need of the applicant, and the ability of the scholarship to meet that need, may be granted in sums up to $600.00 per year and in cases of extreme need, $700.00 or $800.00 per year.

These grants are offered to students who are entering the 10th or 11th grade. To be eligible a student must be a member of the Society of Friends or have one parent who is a Friend. There will probably not be any vacancies in the 11th grade in the fall of 1959.

The grants are awarded on the basis of character, leadership, and scholarship. Once granted, scholarships may be retained until graduation, provided the faculty is satisfied with the standard of work and conduct maintained. Application must be made before the end of the year directly to the school, the deadline being January 1, 1959.

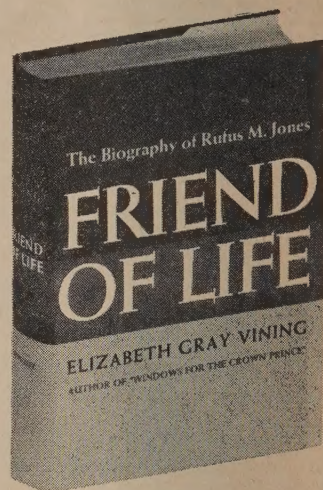

For further information on applications please write:

J. KIRK RUSSELL,

Director of Admissions, Box 500,
Westtown School, Westtown, Pa.

A FINE BOOK TO GIVE THIS CHRISTMAS

Elizabeth Gray Vining's fine biography of RUFUS M. JONES

• "Now we who knew Rufus Jones can refresh our memories and stand exalted in awe as we learn of the great services of this great man in fields of which we were scarcely aware. Now those who never knew him can experience something of his greatness and of the enthusiastic affection for people which made him so effective as leader and teacher."

—RICHARD R. WOOD,
Friends Journal

• "Elizabeth Gray Vining, whose literary skill has told us about the Crown Prince of Japan, has here caught the spirit and genius of her subject. All one can hope to do in a 'review' of her book, Friend of Life, is to encourage you to read it."

—CLARENCE PICKETT,
The Saturday Review

• "It must be considered the definitive biography." —

—FRANCES WITHERSPOON,
New York Herald Tribune
